

What you can see

Coxwold is a village on the southern edge of the North York Moors National Park. At one end of the village stands Shandy Hall, home of Laurence Sterns (1713-68), one-time vicar of Coxwold and author of The Life and Opinions of Tristram Shandy. The hall contains the world's largest collection of first editions of Stern's work.

A Hike in the Howardian Hills
from Coxwold

1. Starting in the centre of Coxwold, walk past the church towards Shandy Hall at the edge of the village.
2. Take the public footpath directly opposite Shandy Hall, through a gate into a pasture field. Walk along the edge of this field and through two gates into another pasture field. Walk diagonally right across this field to a field gate and onto a grass sward between two arable fields.
3. Straight ahead in the distance is the village of Hustwaite and the White Horse is to the right. Continue on cross-field and field-edge paths, through a gap and several gates, crossing the lane to Coxwold Park House and through two metal gates.
4. Continue across a pasture field and join a farm track that takes you to Angram Hall.
5. Walking on this track, go between several farm buildings and immediately after Angram Hall turn left through a field gate onto a cross-field path. Leave the field by the stile and join the road.

6. Pass the disused railway line and cross Elphin Beck bridge, then turn right at the next footpath signpost, go through a gap onto a field-edge path and walk towards the church in Hustwaite.
7. In the village, turn left then right onto the road known as The Nookin, and then take the footpath between Bank Cottage and Walnut House. Go through two kissing gates, then into a pasture field and turn left. Leave this field using two kissing gates adjacent to Squirrel Woodcrafts.
8. Turn left and cross the road and take the bridleway past Beacon Banks and Lists House. Go through several gates onto a field-edge path.
9. Passing a woodland and trig point, with the White Horse to your left, continue past more woodland and turn on a short cross-field path to join the road.
10. Turn left and follow this road for a short distance to High Leys Farm, then turn left onto a footpath just before the farm, across several pasture fields, heading in the first instance diagonally right to a stile partly hidden in the hedge. Go through a field gate, and along a field-edge path to a footbridge.
